

College means study and study at Black Mountain means hard work. It means extensive reading and considerable reflection. It means the experience of creating and the adventure of discovery. It means hours in a study behind a "do not disturb" sign, and it means discussions and conversations from breakfast to bedtime. It means that a student works intensively in a chosen field, but it means also that he takes courses in the social sciences, the physical sciences, the arts, language and literature. Above all, it means finding things out for himself, coming to his own conclusions about them, fitting past and present ideas and events into his conception of the world.